Program Overview

CAMPUS Asia (Collective Action for Mobility Program of University Students in Asia) is an exchange program that is conducted with the support of the Education Ministry of the Korean, Chinese, and Japanese governments, which aims to become the Asian version of ERASMUS. Since the 2012 spring semester, KU GSIS has established a consortium with GSICS of Kobe University and SIRPA of Fudan University. These three universities are running exchange student programs and dual degree programs to train graduate students to become risk management experts in East Asia.

School of International Service, American University, United States

American University's School of International Service (SIS) is a top-10 school of international affairs located in Washington, D.C., ranked No. 8 for Master's program around the world in 2018. World-renowned faculty—leading political scientists, economists, sociologists, anthropologists, demographers, geographers, historians, and experts in international development, global health, communications, energy, and the environment—produce transformational research and prepare more than 3,000 graduate students for global careers in government, nonprofits, and business. Thoughtful and aspirational, with wide-ranging backgrounds and experience, students take advantage of Washington's wealth of resources and professional opportunities, and active international network of more than 20,000 alumni.

CAMPUS Asia Plus Program

Please note that while all GSIS students can benefit from special lectures, due to CAMPUS Asia regulations, only Korean are eligible to apply for this funding.
